TEAM WORK

Compatibility and good team work is crucial for team success. Having a number of talented top; liners in your side does not always guarantee success but rather that success is more often a team of less talented bowlers who choose to work together to achieve a shared team outcome.

All members have a clearly defined role and in addition we have a responsibility to help motivate and encourage one another. Concentrate on team goals and not individual performances. Never criticise one another when you play bad shots or have a bad day, it maybe your turn next. No one gains from that process and it certainly does nothing for the team morale. Beware of your body language sometimes that says it all.

Open communication is important. You should be able to put your view forward to the team without it being held against you. Harmony grows when you listen to others and they listen to you, when you accept their differences and they accept yours. Maintain a positive attitude and trust in one another and share your wins and losses as a team.

Offer no excuses. You are responsible for your own performance. Admit you were not that good on the day but what are you going to do about it. Have team meetings after the game, analyse why you lost and learn from it.

Remember you become a team when you all possess a common identity, share your goals and objectives and commit to trust in one another and most importantly you must really want to be part of that team.
